A touching end to the story concluded when Stephen mentioned there was a plaque dedicated to his teacher hidden on the QM2 and he hopes one day it will be found and the inspirational story will be exposed. These lawsuit profiles are but a small sample of the numerous lawsuits brought against companies in an effort to hold them legally accountable for human rights abuses. The event was organised by the Combustion Engineering Association (CEA), a registered educational charity aimed at improving the understanding and development of the combustion industry. The entertaining anecdotes throughout the lecture included his childhood story of a single-minded determination to achieve a boyhood dream – to build a liner that would be reminiscent of the Queen Elizabeth 2 (QM2’s predecessor). Pete Waterman OBE, the Association’s President presented the award to Byworth which was accepted by the system’s creator, Jason Atkinson and Adrian Rhodes. Dennis used steam in his process to grow Chrysanthemums Jason Atkinson (developer of Unity) controls the Unity system at Timothy Taylor’s site. Originally formed in 1933, it advocates science and best practice of combustion and engineering, with a long history of promoting efficiency in the utilisation of all fuel types. It was then that Derry Carr, Chairman of the Association, announced Byworth Boilers had won this prestigious award for its Unity control system. Stephen Payne OBE, commands the attention of his audience with his entertaining lecture The events of the afternoon turned to recognising the efforts of people within the industry. From left to right: Jason Atkinson, Control Systems Engineer; Pete Waterman, OBE and President of the CEA; Adrian Rhodes, Vice Chairman of the CEA; Derry Carr, Chairman of the CEA The award recognises Byworth’s contribution to enhancing both safety and efficiency in the boiler house. After a two-year development project, Unity was born. Here’s a brief look into what our database tells us: selected based on the salience of the alleged abuse and litigation strategy used making the extractives sector the most prevalent in the database (including Indigenous peoples and ethnic groups) meaning victims are using transnational litigation to pursue justice Read our methodology to understand the information our database captures. Posted on 3rd November 2015 by Byworth Boilers On the 22nd October, Byworth travelled down to London to attend the David Gunn Memorial Lecture & Lord Ezra Awards 2015 at the House of Lords. Unity, was first touted as an idea in 2007 to the existing controls manufacturers; but after years of getting nowhere trying to persuade them to take on the development, Byworth felt so strongly that the industry was missing the key technological advancement, it appointed one of its own staff to develop the idea into the finished product. Despite its high-tech nature, Unity strikes a chord with the humble roots and entrepreneurial spirit of the business founder, Dennis Baldwin. Much of Dennis’ working life was as a user of steam, rather than a steam engineer. The event began with a fantastic lecture by Dr Stephen Payne OBE, the chief naval architect of the Queen Mary 2 (QM2) – Cunard’s flagship ocean liner, which entered service in 2004. He became frustrated with the limited functionality and features of the boilers on the market at the time and after failing to find a single boiler that met his requirements he decided to create his own. In December 2020, we launched our Lawsuit Database which includes all lawsuits we have profiled to date. You can download the paper by clicking the button above. What was perhaps more inspiring was his memories of a supportive teacher he had throughout his education and career. Dennis Baldwin, Founder of Byworth Boilers. It was said teacher that persuaded Stephen to ‘follow his dreams’ which led him down his successful path. The pinnacle of which was the Lord Derek Ezra Award 2015 for achievement in areas of higher efficiency, safety and lower emissions in industrial combustion. They stayed in touch throughout Stephen’s career and unfortunately the teacher passed away just before the QM2 was first to set sail.
